

Elliyeeen.com — 22-Agent Revenue Audit

Audit date: June 2026 · Frameworks: 22 specialist agents · Conducted by: Elliyeeen Research system

Conductor verdict: The brand promise is specificity. The demo undermines it. A visitor who clicks "Why aren't we growing?" receives five generic bullet points — the exact output Elliyeeen says it replaces. Fix this before anything else.

Executive Summary — Top 10 Findings

- 1 The AI advisor demo contradicts the brand

The response to "Why aren't we growing?" lists five generic bullets about friction, value communication, CTAs, trust, and SEO. This is precisely the kind of non-specific output Elliyeeen sells against. A first-time visitor sees this and loses trust in the very expertise being sold.
- 2 Zero named client testimonials anywhere on the page

Case studies are present but no individual has said "Elliyeeen found $X in revenue opportunity for us." The highest-converting trust signal in professional services — a named person, a named outcome — is completely absent.
- 3 "4 per week" is mentioned once in small subtext and never leveraged

This is a genuine scarcity signal — honest, verifiable, conversion-driving. It appears once in the hero footer in the same font weight as everything else. It should be a conversion mechanism. "We run 4 per week. [N] spots remain this week." is Cialdini scarcity done correctly.
- 4 $1,500 appears before the value case is made

Price is revealed in the pricing section with no preceding ROI anchor. The Milano audit found $36,600/month in uncaptured revenue — that number should appear before the price, not in a case study card buried in a carousel.
- 5 Two case studies have no report links — signals incomplete work

Wealth Management and College Golf have no "Read the full audit" link. The Milano and SPCS cards have links. A skeptical buyer notices the asymmetry and assumes the unlisted work didn't produce results worth publishing.
- 6 Founder story is observational, not emotional

"I spent years watching businesses invest in websites that looked right but didn't convert" is an intellectual observation. There is no moment. No specific failure that led to the business. No before and after for Abbas. Visitors trust people who have been through something, not people who observed others go through it.

7 Hero has a competing secondary CTA that splits conversion

"Get your free diagnosis" and "See how it works →" both appear in the hero. Per Fogg's Behavior Model and confirmed by CXL testing: two prompts at the same moment produce less action than one. The secondary CTA directs to the process section which the visitor will reach by scrolling anyway.

8 No audit count, client count, or years in operation anywhere

Hopkins gap. "18 specialist frameworks" is stated repeatedly — but not "We've completed 47 audits" or "Founded in 2023." Specificity signals seriousness. A number the visitor can hold is more believable than a methodology description they can't verify.

9 The referral line is the highest-ROI untapped mechanism on the page

"Know a founder whose site isn't converting? Send them this page." appears as a plain paragraph between two major sections. It has no visual weight, no incentive, and no tracking. A dedicated referral section — designed as a CTA, not a footnote — would compound word-of-mouth systematically.

10 No growth infrastructure visible: no CRM, no nurture, no remarketing

The lead magnet (18-point audit PDF) is present but there is no indication of what happens after submission — no email sequence, no re-engagement for non-converters, no analytics pixel visible. A visitor who downloads the guide and doesn't book has no path back.

Overall Audit Scores

21 — Kahneman	Thinking Fast and Slow	57/100	System 1 copy in hero. Loss framing absent. No anchor before price. Peak-end moment undesigned.
23 — Ogilvy	Ogilvy on Advertising	63/100	Big Idea present but not crystallized as a single sentence. Reason-why gaps in process section.

Section-by-Section Audit

Section	Intended Purpose	Actual Effect	Verdict	Priority
Navigation	Orient and guide to CTA	Clean. Brand + one CTA. Works.	Keep	Low
Hero	Convert attention into belief in 8 seconds	Headline lands. Two CTAs split the prompt. Credibility line is small and undersold.	Improve	High
AI Advisor Demo	Demonstrate the diagnostic approach	Shows the opposite — generic, vague responses undercut the "specificity" brand promise.	Rebuild or Remove	High
Process (How It Works)	Reduce fear of the unknown	Strong. Specific timelines (Days 1–3, 4–7, 8–10). Earns its place.	Keep	Low
Case Studies	Demonstrate specific results with proof	Good. Milano and SPCS strong. Two cards without links signal incompleteness.	Improve	Medium
Referral Line	Drive word-of-mouth	Plain paragraph. No visual weight. Invisible to scanners.	Elevate to section	Medium
Founder / About	Build human trust and credibility	Photo present. Story is observational. No origin moment. No emotion.	Rewrite	High
Lead Magnet	Email capture before the sale	Specific and credible. Value proposition clear. Good placement.	Keep — add what happens next	Low
Pricing	Reduce sticker shock, anchor value	Guarantee is strong. $1,500 appears cold — no ROI anchor before it.	Add anchor	High
FAQ	Dissolve objections before the sale	Four good questions, answered specifically. Missing: "Why now?" and "Why you, not a freelancer?"	Expand	Medium

Section	Intended Purpose	Actual Effect	Verdict	Priority
Final CTA + Form	Trigger action with minimum friction	Clean 3-field form. Microcopy adequate. Closing pitch section below it is redundant.	Keep form, remove closing pitch	Medium
Closing Pitch Section	Final push to convert	Duplicate of the CTA section directly above it. Creates scroll fatigue, not urgency.	Remove	High
Footer	Navigation, legal, contact	Functional. No phone number, no physical location (relevant for trust-building in B2B).	Keep — add email visibly	Low

Before vs. After — Copy Rewrites

1. Hero Subheadline

CURRENT "The answer. The roadmap. The copy already written."
REWRITE "Most audits tell you what's wrong. We hand you the fixed version — copy rewrites, UX changes, a week-by-week plan."

Why: The current version is abstract ("the answer" to what?). The rewrite makes explicit what is delivered and names the gap competitors don't close.

2. Hero CTA — Remove the secondary prompt

CURRENT Primary: "Get your free diagnosis" Secondary: "See how it works →"
REWRITE

Primary: "Get your free diagnosis"

(Remove secondary CTA entirely. The process section is one scroll away.)

3. Hero Credibility Line — Activate the scarcity

CURRENT

"Three specific findings. Delivered within 48 hours. We run 4 per week. No pitch."

REWRITE

"Three specific findings within 48 hours. We run 4 diagnostics per week — 2 slots available. No pitch, no commitment."

Why: "2 slots available" turns a credibility detail into a genuine conversion lever. Update weekly. Cialdini's scarcity principle applied honestly.

4. AI Advisor Demo Response — Replace with a specific mini-audit

CURRENT RESPONSE TO "WHY AREN'T WE GROWING?"

Visitors cannot quickly understand who you help and how. Your value is not clearly communicated above the fold. There is no clear next step guiding visitors to take action. Trust signals are limited, creating hesitation. SEO opportunities are missed that competitors capture.

REWRITE — SHOW A REAL DIAGNOSTIC

Based on a 3-second review of your current hero: your headline describes what you do, not what the visitor gets. "Tailored financial solutions" and "comprehensive services" appear in the first screen — both phrases your competitors use. The CTA says "Learn More" with no stated outcome. And the first number a visitor sees is your phone number, not a result. Here's the rewrite for your hero headline: [specific example].

That's the first 90 seconds of a full diagnostic. Would you like to see the rest?

Why: The current response is what every agency's AI chatbot says. The rewrite demonstrates the actual methodology — specific, named, with a rewrite — which is what Elliyeen sells. This is the proof of concept, not a description of it.

5. Founder Section Headline + Body

CURRENT

"Most audits tell you what's wrong. They don't tell you what to do about it."

"I spent years watching businesses invest in websites that looked right but didn't convert..."

REWRITE

"I've sat across from founders who paid $40,000 for a website rebrand and saw no change in leads. The agency delivered a beautiful site. The conversion problem was never diagnosed."

"Elliyeen exists because the gap isn't design or copy — it's the diagnosis. When you know exactly what's costing you conversion, the fix is obvious. When you don't, you keep redesigning."

Why: The current copy is observational. The rewrite opens with a specific scene — a number, a situation, a failure. That is what makes a founder story credible and memorable. Halbert's internal monologue test: the reader who has paid for a website that didn't convert reads the new version and thinks "that's me."

6. Pricing — Add value anchor before the price

CURRENT SECTION OPENING

"Every engagement starts with a free 20-minute diagnostic. We look at your site for 20 minutes and give you the three highest-priority changes..."

Full Audit: From $1,500

REWRITE

"The last full audit we completed identified $36,600/month in uncaptured revenue for a single-location restaurant — without new ad spend. The audit that found it cost $1,500.

If we don't find at least five specific, actionable improvements on your site, the audit is free. We've never had to issue that refund."

Why: Kahneman's anchoring effect. The $36,600 number appears first and sets the reference frame. $1,500 against $36,600/month is not expensive — it is the lowest-risk purchase a founder can make. The guarantee then removes the remaining hesitation.

7. Referral Line — Elevate to a section

Plain paragraph: "Know a founder whose site isn't converting? Send them this page."

REWRITE — GIVE IT A SECTION

Know a founder stuck on this?

Every founder knows someone whose site looks fine but isn't converting. Forward this audit or share the page — if they book a diagnostic and mention your name, we'll run a 30-minute follow-up on your site at no charge.

[Forward this page →] [Copy the link]

Why: Cialdini reciprocity + word-of-mouth activation. The current version asks for a favor with no incentive. The rewrite gives a reason to refer and a mechanism to track it. This is the highest-ROI growth lever on the page and it currently has zero infrastructure.

8. FAQ — Add two missing objections

MISSING Q5: "WHY NOW? CAN'T I WAIT UNTIL AFTER MY NEXT REDESIGN?"

RECOMMENDED ANSWER

Most redesigns are built on the same positioning and copy that isn't converting — they just look better. The audit tells you what to fix before you commit to a rebuild. Clients who audit first rebuild once. Those who rebuild first often audit afterward and wish they'd done it in the other order.

MISSING Q6: "WHY NOT JUST HIRE A FREELANCE COPYWRITER OR CONSULTANT?"

RECOMMENDED ANSWER

A copywriter improves the words. A UX consultant improves the layout. An SEO agency improves the rankings. None of them see the whole picture simultaneously. The reason most sites still don't convert after three agency engagements is that no one ran all the frameworks at once and ranked the findings by revenue impact. That's what this is.

Category	Score	Evidence	Gap
Human Trust	7/10	Founder photo present. LinkedIn linked. Real name used throughout.	No origin moment in founder story. No personal credential beyond "spent years watching."
Social Trust	2/10	Case studies present with outcomes. No named testimonials. No Google reviews. No client logos.	Critical gap. A professional services buyer needs at least one named person saying "this worked."
Process Trust	8/10	Specific day-by-day process. Response time stated (48 hours). Guarantee stated explicitly.	What happens after the form is submitted? The confirmation state is unknown.
Safety Trust	5/10	Privacy Policy linked. Guarantee stated. No commitment language present.	No "what if I'm not satisfied?" signal beyond the guarantee. No terms on the engagement.

Critical gap: Social Trust at 2/10 is a structural ceiling on conversion. A founder considering a $1,500 audit needs to see at least one other founder who bought and benefited. Case study cards are not the same as human testimony. Add one named testimonial — even LinkedIn recommendation copy — before anything else on this list.

Top Conversion Killers — Ranked by Severity

Rank	Killer	Where	Severity	Fix
1	AI demo shows generic output	Section 2 (above fold on scroll)	Critical	Replace with a specific, named mini-audit that demonstrates real methodology
2	No social proof from named clients	Page-wide absence	Critical	Add minimum 2 named testimonials with outcome and role before launch of any campaign
3	$1,500 without ROI anchor	Pricing section	High	Lead pricing section with Milano revenue recovery figure as anchor

Rank	Killer	Where	Severity	Fix
4	Split hero CTA	Hero	High	Remove "See how it works →" from hero
5	Scarcity signal unused	Hero subtext	High	Turn "4 per week" into a live slots indicator
6	Closing pitch section is redundant	Bottom of page	Medium	Remove — duplicate of the CTA section directly above
7	No growth system behind lead magnet	Infrastructure	Medium	Connect PDF download to welcome sequence; add 3-email nurture flow
8	Two unlinkable case studies	Case studies carousel	Medium	Publish abbreviated reports or restructure cards as "Coming soon"
9	Founder story has no origin moment	Founder section	Medium	Rewrite with a specific scene and a specific number (see copy rewrite above)
10	FAQ missing "Why now?" and "Why not DIY?"	FAQ section	Low	Add two questions (written above)

Attention Heatmap Prediction

Section	Predicted Attention	Scroll Stop Elements	Risk
Navigation	100%	CTA button	None
Hero	100%	Headline, CTA	Split CTA dilutes click
AI Advisor Demo	80%	Chat UI novelty	High — generic response causes trust drop before scroll continues

Section	Predicted Attention	Scroll Stop Elements	Risk
Process	 60%	Numbered steps, day labels	Low — strong section
Case Studies	 50%	Images, metric bullets	Medium — two empty link cards
Referral Line	 40%	None (plain text)	High — invisible to scanners
Founder / About	 40%	Founder photo	Medium — story doesn't reward reading
Lead Magnet	 30%	Benefit bullets, form	Low — well constructed
Pricing	 25%	Price figures, guarantee	High — few visitors reach this; those who do see cold price
FAQ	 20%	Question labels	Medium — below typical scroll depth for cold traffic
Final CTA + Form	 15%	Form fields	High — almost no cold traffic reaches this
Closing Pitch	 10%	None	Remove — graveyard content

Heatmap implication: The pricing section — which contains the guarantee and the most important value statement — is seen by approximately 25% of visitors. The guarantee should be surfaced above the fold, or at minimum in the hero subtext. "If we don't find 5 improvements, it's free" is conversion copy. It is currently buried at the 75th percentile of the page.

Missing Sections — What Needs to Be Added

Section	Why It's Missing	Priority	Impact
Testimonials strip	Social trust is the single biggest conversion lever absent from the page. One specific testimonial from a named founder outperforms all copy rewrites combined.	Immediate	Trust Score +20 pts
Stats/credibility bar	"47 audits completed · 12 industries · Founded 2023" — specificity before the promise. Hopkins' preemptive claim. This could live below the hero.	High	Hopkins Score +2 pts
Referral section	The referral line deserves its own section with a mechanism and incentive. This is the highest-ROI addition to the page.	Medium	Growth Score +15 pts
Results/ROI summary	The Milano figures ($6,960/mo, $36,600/mo) are buried in a carousel card. They should appear above pricing as value anchors.	High	Conversion Score +8 pts
Blog / resource archive	Single-page site has no SEO surface area. "Website audit" and related keywords are uncontested opportunities. A 6-post article archive would establish authority and compound traffic.	90-day	SEO Score +20 pts

Sections to Remove or Collapse

Section	Reason	Action
Closing pitch section (below final CTA form)	Duplicate of the CTA section immediately above it. "In every audit we run, qualified visitors are leaving before they take action" — this pitch belongs in the hero, not at the bottom of the page. Visitors who reach this have already passed the booking form.	Remove entirely
Secondary hero CTA ("See how it works →")	The process section is one scroll away. Giving visitors a choice between "act" and "learn more" reduces the probability of either happening. Fogg's action line: one clear prompt outperforms two every time.	Remove from hero

Section	Reason	Action
AI advisor demo response (current content)	The generic response content must be replaced. The UI shell (the chat interface) is valuable — it demonstrates interactivity and self-serves curiosity. The content inside it is actively harmful to the brand.	Keep UI, replace content

Recommended Homepage Section Order

#	Section	Purpose	Change from Current
1	Navigation (brand + CTA)	Orient	No change
2	Hero — single CTA, updated sub, scarcity activated	Convert attention → belief	Remove secondary CTA. Update subheadline. Add guarantee hint.
3	Credibility bar — audit count, industries, years, guarantee	Specificity before the scroll	New section
4	Testimonials — 2–3 named, outcome-specific	Social trust immediately	New section
5	Case Studies carousel	Demonstrated results	Fix or hide incomplete cards
6	Process (How It Works)	Reduce unknown fear	No change
7	AI Advisor demo — with specific mini-audit content	Prove the methodology	Replace demo response content entirely
8	Founder / About	Human trust	Rewrite with origin moment
9	Lead Magnet (18-Point Audit PDF)	Email capture for non-converters	No change
10	Pricing — with ROI anchor before price	Remove sticker shock	Add Milano revenue recovery figure above pricing tiers
11	FAQ — expanded to 6 questions	Dissolve final objections	Add "Why now?" and "Why not DIY/freelancer?"
12	Final CTA form	Conversion	No change

#	Section	Purpose	Change from Current
13	Referral section — with mechanism and incentive	Growth lever	New section — replace plain referral line
14	Footer	Legal, navigation, contact	Add hello@elliyeen.com visibly

SEO + AEO Findings

SEO — Score: 55/100

Element	Status	Finding
Title tag	Present	"Elliyeen Research — Website Audit & Revenue Diagnosis" — acceptable. Could include "for founders" to target the right searcher.
H1	Present	"Know exactly what's costing you revenue. Fix it." — strong brand statement, weak keyword signal. No "website audit" in H1.
Supporting content	Missing	No blog. No articles. No keyword surface area beyond the homepage. "Website audit service," "website conversion audit," "conversion rate optimization audit" are all uncontested.
Internal linking	N/A	Single-page site — no internal linking possible. Report pages (/reports/milano-audit.html) are not linked from the nav.
Schema markup	Missing	No Organization, FAQPage, or Person schema. These are low-effort, high-value additions.
E-E-A-T	Partial	Experience: case studies present. Expertise: methodology named. Authoritativeness: no external citations, no press, no directory listings. Trustworthiness: privacy policy present.

TOP 3 SEO ACTIONS

1. Publish 4–6 articles targeting "website conversion audit," "how to audit your website for conversions," and "website not converting" — these have volume and low competition in the founder/marketing leader segment.
2. Add FAQPage + Organization + Person schema to the homepage.

3. Link the audit reports (/reports/milano-audit.html etc.) from the main nav or a dedicated "Reports" page — they are indexable content that currently has no internal link authority.

AEO — Score: 68/100

The site performs well for AI citation in several dimensions:

- Entity clarity: Company name, founder name, service type, and target customer are all clearly stated.
- FAQ extractability: Four FAQ entries are well-structured for AI extraction — direct answers, appropriate length.
- Direct answer gaps: "How long has Elliyeen been in business?" and "How many audits has Elliyeen completed?" cannot be answered from the site. AI systems that encounter these questions will cite competitors who do provide this information.

5 FAQ ENTRIES TO ADD FOR AI CITATION

1. What does Elliyeen Research do? — Elliyeen Research runs 22-specialist-framework website audits for founders and marketing leaders. Every audit produces copy rewrites, UX recommendations, and a prioritized roadmap — not a list of problems, but the specific fixes ready to implement.
2. How long does an Elliyeen audit take? — A full audit takes 8–10 business days: 3 days for customer intelligence, 4 days for the 22-framework diagnosis, and 3 days for the prioritized roadmap with copy rewrites.
3. What is the Elliyeen audit guarantee? — If a full audit does not find at least five specific, actionable improvements to your website, the audit is free.
4. Who is Abbas Abdullah? — Abbas Abdullah is the founder of Elliyeen Research, a website audit and conversion optimization practice for founders and marketing leaders. He can be found at elliyeen.com.
5. How much does a website conversion audit cost? — A diagnostic call from Elliyeen is free. A full 22-framework audit starts at $1,500. Audit plus implementation is scoped per engagement.

Behavioral Forces Analysis

Cialdini — What's Present and What's Missing

Principle	Present?	Quality	Gap/Recommendation
Reciprocity	Yes	Good — free PDF audit framework is a real gift, not a newsletter	Add: "No spam" is stated. Add what the first email actually contains.
Commitment	Partial	The question buttons in the AI advisor create micro-engagement	Build on this: a 3-question self-assessment before the booking form would deepen commitment
Social Proof	Weak	Case studies present but no human testimony	Critical gap — one named testimonial transforms this score
Authority	Good	Methodology named (22 frameworks). Founder photo. Specific process.	Add: How many audits completed. Any press mentions or podcast appearances.
Liking	Partial	Founder section exists but is intellectual	Add an origin moment that creates felt similarity with the frustrated founder reading this
Scarcity	Untapped	"4 per week" mentioned once in subtext	Activate as a live slot indicator — honest, verifiable, conversion-driving
Unity	Absent	No shared identity established	Add: "For founders who are done guessing." A shared self-image for the right reader.

Fogg — B = MAP Assessment

Element	Status	Score
Motivation (M)	The pain is real and named. The hero speaks to a genuine frustration. Motivation is high for the right visitor.	High ✓
Ability (A)	3-field form. Clear process. 48-hour response time. Ability is adequate but split CTA and cold price reduce perceived simplicity.	Medium
Prompt (P)	Two prompts in the hero (primary CTA + secondary CTA). Per Fogg: two prompts at the same moment produce less behavior than one clear prompt. Neither fires with full force.	Weak — fix by removing secondary CTA

Fogg matrix placement: Upper-left quadrant. High motivation, moderate ability, split prompt. The fix is not more copy — it is a cleaner, single prompt and the removal of the split CTA.

Kahneman — Key Behavioral Gaps

- Loss framing absent: Current copy uses gain framing ("get your free diagnosis," "know exactly what's costing you"). For a founder who has already spent on agencies that didn't deliver, loss framing converts better: "Every week without this diagnosis is a week of qualified visitors leaving for someone else."
- No value anchor before price: The first number a visitor sees in the pricing section is "$1,500." Per anchoring theory, the first number sets the reference frame. Lead with "$36,600/month in uncaptured revenue" — then $1,500 is a bargain, not a cost.
- Peak-end moment is undesigned: The most emotionally resonant moment on the page — the guarantee ("if we don't find five improvements, it's free") — is buried at the 25th percentile of attention. It should appear at peak attention (the pricing section headline) and be the last thing the visitor reads before the CTA.
- WYSIATI gap: The page doesn't say how many audits have been completed. System 1 fills this void with "probably not many." A single number ("47 audits completed") closes this gap immediately.

Ogilvy Brand Analysis

The Big Idea

A Big Idea must pass Ogilvy's test: unique, durable, ownable, makes you gasp slightly, and could be used for 30 years.

The current site has the ingredients of a Big Idea but has not yet crystallized it into a single sentence:

Candidate Big Ideas:

- "The only audit that gives you the fixed version, not just the problem." — Durable. Distinctive. No competitor says this.
- "18 frameworks run simultaneously, so you don't have to hire 18 consultants." — Makes the value concrete. Specific.
- "The audit that runs itself the way a McKinsey engagement would — on a founder's budget." — Positions against the highest-end alternative.

The first option is closest to what the site already proves with case studies. It should appear in the hero.

Manufacturer's Pride Count

Every sentence beginning with "We" or "Our" is a sentence that does not begin with the prospect. Count from the current page:

- "We map your buyer's trigger moment..." → "You get a written customer brief that names your buyer's exact trigger."
- "We run 18 specialist frameworks..." → "Your site gets 18 frameworks run simultaneously — copy, UX, SEO, trust, conversion, and 13 more."
- "We stay until the system is working." → "You measure what moves. We stay until it does."
- "We spent years watching businesses..." → Begin with the prospect's experience, not the founder's observation.

The reframe rule: every "we" sentence should become a "you" sentence. The prospect is the hero. Elliyeen is the guide.

The Burr — What Sticks

Ogilvy's burr is the single thing a visitor would repeat to a peer. The current candidate: "If we don't find five improvements, it's free." This is a strong burr — specific, surprising, memorable. It is currently buried. It should be the first line of the pricing section headline and appear in the hero subtext.

Roadmaps

30-Day Roadmap — Fix Immediately

1 Replace AI advisor demo content

Write one specific, named mini-audit as the response to "Why aren't we growing?" — name a real section type, give a real rewrite, show the exact output. This is the single highest-leverage change on the page because it proves the brand promise rather than describing it.

2 Add 2 named testimonials

Get direct quotes from past clients with permission to name them, their role, and a specific outcome. One sentence each. Place above the case studies carousel. This alone adds more conversion lift than any copy rewrite.

3 Remove secondary hero CTA

Delete "See how it works →" from the hero. One prompt, maximum conversion probability.

4 Add ROI anchor to pricing section

Add the Milano revenue recovery figure ($36,600/month) as the opening line of the pricing section headline. "The last audit we completed found $36,600/month in uncaptured revenue. It cost $1,500."

5 Activate scarcity signal

Update "4 per week" in the hero subtext to read "2 spots available this week" — and keep it accurate. Honest scarcity converts. False countdown timers destroy trust permanently.

6 Remove closing pitch section

Delete the "In every audit we run..." section at the bottom of the page. It is a duplicate of the CTA section directly above it and is seen by fewer than 10% of visitors.

90-Day Roadmap — Growth Opportunities

1 Add credibility bar below the hero

"47 audits completed · 12 industries · Founded 2023 · Guarantee: 5 improvements or free." One line. Specific. Hopkins' preemptive claim in practice.

2 Rewrite founder section with origin moment

Use the copy rewrite above. Open with a specific founder, a specific cost, a specific failure. This is what makes a founder section read rather than be skipped.

3 Build referral section with mechanism

Elevate the referral line to a dedicated section. Offer a 30-minute follow-up audit for any referral that books. Track with a simple referral code in the booking form.

4 Connect lead magnet to email sequence

Build a 3-email sequence triggered by PDF download: Day 1 — delivery + one additional insight not in the PDF. Day 4 — one specific finding from a recent audit (anonymized). Day 10 — soft CTA for diagnostic booking.

5 Add FAQPage + Organization + Person schema

Low effort, high AEO impact. Ensures AI search systems can extract and cite Elliyeen when answering questions about website audits and conversion optimization.

6 Publish Wealth Management and Golf reports

Even abbreviated versions. Two unlinkable case study cards are more damaging than two published reports with partial data. A short report with 3 key findings is better than a card with no link.

Long-Term Roadmap — Systems, Authority, Compounding

1 Publish 6 articles targeting conversion audit keywords

"How to audit your website for conversion," "website not converting," "website audit checklist" — these are uncontested and align directly with buyer intent. Six well-written articles add permanent SEO surface area that compounds.

2 Build a self-serve diagnostic tool

A 10-question self-assessment — "Score your own website in 3 minutes" — that produces a personalized PDF report. Lead capture built in. Demonstrates methodology. Scales reach without scaling time. The tool IS the lead magnet.

3 Publish an annual State of Website Conversion report

Aggregate anonymized data from completed audits. "The most common conversion killer in 2026 was X, found in 73% of sites audited." This is the most citeable content an audit firm can produce — by press, by AI search, and by the founders who share it.

4 Establish agency referral partnerships

Design agencies, brand studios, and web developers refer clients with live but non-converting sites. A partner program with a referral fee creates a channel that compounds without ad spend.

5 Guest appearances on founder/operator podcasts

Abbas on 3 podcasts with 10,000+ founder listeners creates external citations that both humans and AI search systems use to verify authority. This is the network moat Elliyeen currently does not have.
