OVERVIEW

Executive Summary

"SAX has made a strategic investment in athletes and entertainers by hiring a Director for this practice. That investment is currently invisible to any athlete, agent, or advisor who finds SAX online."

This audit covers all four SAX digital properties — the advisory group, the wealth advisors, the capital advisors, and the technology arm — evaluated through a single lens: can an athlete, agent, or referring advisor find the Athletes & Artists service, understand why SAX is different from any other firm that claims to serve athletes, and take a next step?

The answer, across all four sites, is no. Three of the four contain zero athlete mentions. The one that does — saxwa.com — buries Athletes & Artists eighth of nine services, has no named team contact on the athletes page, and positions the integrated model (SAX's primary differentiator) in bullet seven of eight. Carla Lide, hired as Director of Athletes, Artists & Entertainers, does not appear on any of the four sites.

CENTRAL FINDING

The Athletes & Artists service page exists and is substantively written. The problem is not the page — it is that no one can find it, and once found, no one knows who to call.

STRUCTURE

The Four-Site Ecosystem

SAX operates four distinct websites under four distinct brand names, each serving a different audience. The only cross-site navigation is a small utility bar showing logos and names of the other entities — with no description of what each one does.

saxadvisorygroup.com

PARENT · CPA · ACCOUNTING & ADVISORY

Tagline: "Accounting for the Future." Audience: mid-market businesses, nonprofits. Zero athlete mentions. Core Solutions and Industry Expertise pages contain lorem ipsum placeholder text — live in production.

WEALTH ADVISORS · CONTAINS THE ATHLETES & ARTISTS PAGE

The only SAX site that mentions athletes. Athletes & Artists is listed eighth of nine services. The page is substantive but has no named contact, no Carla Lide, and the integrated model — SAX's core differentiator — is buried in bullet seven of eight.

CAPITAL ADVISORS · INVESTMENT BANKING · M&A

except an unlabeled utility bar logo.

saxtechnology.com

TECHNOLOGY ADVISORS · IT STRATEGY · CYBERSECURITY

Audience: businesses seeking IT and AI transformation. Zero athlete mentions. Homepage hero heading reads "Medium length hero heading goes here" — live placeholder text in production. Links to saxllp.com (a fifth domain) rather than saxadvisorygroup.com.

The fundamental navigation problem: A prospective athlete client, agent, or referring financial advisor has no way to know — from three of the four SAX sites — that SAX serves athletes at all. The only path to the Athletes & Artists page requires already knowing it exists, navigating to saxwa.com, finding the Services menu, and scrolling past seven other services to reach it.

SITE 1 OF 4

SAX Advisory Group

saxadvisorygroup.com

CRITICAL

Two pages accessible from the primary navigation — Core Solutions and Industry Expertise — contain lorem ipsum placeholder body copy live in production. The Industry Expertise page hero also reads "NONPROFIT FOR THE FUTURE," a template fragment left in the CMS. These pages are visible to visitors and indexed by search engines.

What visitors find

Homepage headline: "Accounting for the Future." The hero has three CTAs — "WHAT WE DO," "WHO WE SERVE," "WHO WE ARE" — with no consultation CTA. The newsletter signup is the only form. A background video sourced from a third-party agency (not SAX-branded footage) plays on load. The "Resources" primary navigation link points to # and goes nowhere.

Zero. No mention of athletes, entertainers, high net worth individuals, wealth management, or personal finance anywhere on the site. An athlete's agent arriving here would see an accounting firm with broken pages, no path to athlete-relevant content, and a utility bar showing "SAX WA" — with no explanation of what SAX WA is or why they should click it.

SAX Wealth Advisors

saxwa.com · /services/athletes-and-artists-wealth-advisory/

CONTEXT

This is the only SAX site that mentions athletes. The athletes page exists and is substantively written. The problems are placement, positioning, and the missing team presence.

Homepage

Headline: "Tailored Wealth Solutions for Every Stage." The hero has a persistent "Start Here" CTA linking to a consultation scheduler. The "About Us" and "News & Resources" primary navigation items point to # — the parent links are dead. Only their dropdown items function. On mobile, or in any context where dropdowns fail to load, these sections of the site are unreachable from the nav.

The services overview lists nine categories. Athletes & Artists Wealth Advisory is in position eight of nine. A visitor arriving on the services page sees: Wealth Planning, Investment Management, Proactive Tax Planning, Retirement Planning, Estate Planning, Charitable Planning, Private Client Suite — then Athletes & Artists — then Employer Retirement Plans.

For an athlete or agent who arrives on this page, there is zero visual signal that athletes are a strategic priority for the firm.

Athletes & Artists page — deep dive

The page opens: "Talent creates opportunity — thoughtful planning helps protect and grow it." Eight service pillars follow. The integrated model — access to SAX's CPA and tax team under one roof — appears as "Thoughtful Tax Coordination" in position seven of eight. This is the primary differentiator from a standalone RIA, and it is listed after Fiduciary Guidance, Holistic Investment, Career-to-Retirement Framework, Risk Awareness, and Legacy Planning.

POSITIONING PROBLEM

The integrated model is SAX's answer to "why choose SAX over a standalone RIA?" It should open the page. It is currently in bullet seven. An agent reading down through six bullets before reaching the differentiator will often not reach it.

Team — athletes practice

The team page lists Kirk E. Loerwald, CFP®, MBA, AIF® as "Partner, Athletes & Artists Leader" and Ryan Harris as "Strategic Partnerships & Athlete Relations" — among 30+ advisors with no visual distinction for the athletes practice. Neither has a direct email, phone number, or intake link. Carla Lide does not appear anywhere on saxwa.com.

SITE 3 OF 4

SAX Capital Advisors

saxca.com

This site serves founders and executives preparing for business sales, mergers, and M&A. Headline: "Your Success Is Our Business." The firm lists 20+ years of advisory experience, 80+ completed transactions, and $30B+ in transaction value. Clear purpose, defined audience.

It has zero relevance to athlete wealth management as currently built. An athlete's agent landing here finds nothing applicable and has only unlabeled utility bar logos to navigate elsewhere.

Missed connection: Athletes and entertainers frequently build businesses alongside their playing careers — production companies, clothing lines, restaurants, media properties. SAX Capital Advisors is a natural extension of the athletes practice for clients who need transaction advisory on those business interests. One sentence and one link would create this connection. None currently exists.

SITE 4 OF 4

SAX Technology Advisors

saxtechnology.com

CRITICAL

The homepage hero heading contains live placeholder text: "Medium length hero heading goes here." This is visible on the homepage of a professional financial services firm and is indexed by search engines.

This site serves businesses seeking IT strategy, cybersecurity, managed services, and AI transformation. Industries listed include Healthcare, Insurance, Construction, Automotive, Financial Services, and Real Estate. Sports and entertainment are not listed.

The utility bar links to saxllp.com instead of saxadvisorygroup.com — introducing a fifth SAX domain name into the navigation ecosystem with no explanation. A visitor following cross-site links from saxtechnology.com encounters an unexpected fifth brand identity.

The utility bar is an escape hatch, not navigation

All four sites share a utility bar at the top showing logos and names linking to the other three entities. For this to work as navigation, a visitor must already know that SAX has multiple entities and what each one does. There is no description of what each entity offers anywhere in the bar. An agent seeing "SAX WA" has no way to know that means Wealth Advisory without already knowing.

Entity naming is inconsistent across sites

ENTITY	NAMES FOUND IN USE
Parent firm	"SAX" · "Sax LLP" · "SAX Advisory Group" · "Sax Advisory Group LLC" · saxllp.com · saxadvisorygroup.com
Wealth advisory	"SAX Wealth Advisors" · "SAX WA" · "Sax Wealth Advisory" · "SAX Wealth Advisory"
Capital advisory	"SAX Capital Advisors" · "SAX CA" · "SAX Capitol Advisory" MISSPELLING ON SAXWA.COM
Technology	"SAX Technology Advisors" · "Sax Technology" · "SAX Tech"

A prospective client or agent conducting due diligence across multiple SAX entities would encounter these naming variants and may not understand they are researching one integrated firm. "SAX Capitol Advisory" — misspelled on every page of saxwa.com — is a factual error that signals inattention to anyone who notices it.

No master hub explains the SAX family

There is no single page that maps the four entities, explains their relationship, and routes visitors to the right service. The legal footer boilerplate is the only place the relationship is described — in dense compliance language. The most compelling thing about SAX for an athlete is that tax strategy, investment management, accounting, and business advisory work as a coordinated team under one roof. This claim requires the four entities to feel like one firm. They do not.

Scenario: An NBA player's agent receives a referral to SAX. The agent searches "SAX wealth management athletes" and lands on saxadvisorygroup.com — the parent firm, the entity most likely to appear in a branded search.

THE REFERRAL JOURNEY — STEP BY STEP

- 1 Arrives on saxadvisorygroup.com. Headline: "Accounting for the Future." No athlete mention. Core Solutions page — if clicked — shows lorem ipsum. The agent sees a utility bar: SAX WA · SAX CA · SAX Technology. No descriptions. No reason to click one over another.
- 2 Guesses "SAX WA" might mean Wealth Advisory. Clicks it. Lands on saxwa.com: "Tailored Wealth Solutions for Every Stage."
- 3 Clicks "Our Services" in the navigation.
- 4 Sees nine service cards. Scrolls past: Wealth Planning, Investment Management, Proactive Tax Planning, Retirement Planning, Estate Planning, Charitable Planning, Private Client Suite — and finds Athletes & Artists Wealth Advisory in position eight.
- 5 Clicks through to the athletes page. Reads seven service bullet points. The page ends with a generic "Start Here" button.
- 6 Wants to know who to call. Goes to the team page. Sees 30+ names with no visual hierarchy for the athletes practice. No Carla Lide. No direct contact for anyone on the athletes team. No way to reach the athletes practice specifically.

Minimum five to six clicks with zero athlete signal until click four. A busy agent making a referral that stakes their professional reputation encounters no urgency, no named contact, and no explanation of why SAX is different from any other RIA that claims to work with athletes.

INDUSTRY BENCHMARK

Home Instead — the standard-bearer in home care — routes every visitor to a service-specific intake within one click of the homepage. SAX routes athletes to a buried sub-service within a general wealth advisory site after a minimum of four clicks from the most common entry point — and still delivers no named advisor at the end.

THE MISSING ASSET

Carla Lide was hired as Director of Athletes, Artists & Entertainers. The announcement has been shared publicly and is generating professional attention across sports and finance networks. She brings nearly two decades working directly with athletes, deep knowledge of wealth structures for professional sports clients, and relationships across professional sports leagues. Ryan Harris — listed on the saxwa.com team page as "Strategic Partnerships & Athlete Relations" — provided guidance and support for the transition, further signaling the firm's commitment to this practice.

CURRENT STATUS — ALL FOUR SITES

What this costs the firm

- Referral friction: An athlete or agent referred specifically to Carla Lide cannot find her on the SAX website. There is no professional web presence to share, no bio to forward, no way to verify credentials through the firm's own digital channels.
- Trust gap at verification: Agents conducting due diligence on behalf of an athlete expect to verify an advisor's credentials and background on the firm's site. When a named Director does not appear, it raises questions — even for an advisor who is exceptionally qualified.
- Lost search value: Advisors are increasingly discovered by name search. Athletes, agents, and sports finance professionals searching "Carla Lide wealth advisor" or "SAX athlete advisor" find nothing on saxwa.com. The hire's value for inbound discovery is zero until the web presence is built.
- Closing announcement window: The announcement is generating attention now. The window to convert that attention into inbound web discovery is open — and it narrows with each week that passes without a page.

What is needed — now

- A bio page for Carla Lide on saxwa.com: title, background, areas of expertise, and a direct intake link specific to the athletes practice (not the generic scheduler)
- Carla Lide named as the lead on the Athletes & Artists page — photo, title, link to bio or direct intake form
- A news item on saxwa.com and saxadvisorygroup.com: what the hire means, what it creates for athlete clients, what SAX's integrated model offers that standalone advisors cannot

The Athletes & Artists page currently ends with: "Ready to take the first step? Start Here." Replacing that with "Talk to Carla Lide, Director of Athletes, Artists & Entertainers" — with a photo, her background in two sentences, and a direct intake link — changes the conversion probability of the page entirely. Names convert. Generic buttons do not.

RECOMMENDATIONS

Five-Priority Recommendation Set

PRIORITY 1 — FIX WHAT IS BROKEN

Production Errors & Dead Links

Six issues that damage credibility on contact, all fixable in under an hour each:

an unfinished website.

- Fix the hero heading on saxtechnology.com. One CMS field update.
- Fix the dead "Resources" nav link on saxadvisorygroup.com.
- Fix the dead "About Us" and "News & Resources" parent nav links on saxwa.com.
- Fix the dead "Who We Are" parent nav link on saxca.com.
- Global find/replace: "SAX Capitol Advisory" → "SAX Capital Advisory" on saxwa.com.
- Standardize copyright year to 2026 across all four sites.
- Update saxtechnology.com utility bar: link saxadvisorygroup.com, not saxllp.com.

PRIORITY 2 — CREATE THE ATHLETE DISCOVERY PATH

One Click from Every Entry Point

An athlete, agent, or sports financial advisor should be able to arrive on any of the four SAX sites and find a clear, one-click path to the Athletes & Artists service. Currently that path does not exist on three of the four sites.

- saxadvisorygroup.com homepage: Add one feature block — "Serving Athletes & Artists — Learn how SAX Wealth Advisors protects and grows talent income" — with a direct link to the athletes page. No new page required. One homepage update.
- saxca.com: One sentence in the services section: "Athletes and entertainers building businesses alongside their careers — the SAX Athletes & Artists team can help." One link to saxwa.com/services/athletes-and-artists-wealth-advisory/. That is the entire change.
- Utility bar — all sites: Add one-line descriptions beneath each entity name. "SAX Advisory Group — Accounting & Tax" · "SAX Wealth Advisors — Wealth Management & Athletes Advisory" · "SAX Capital Advisors — Investment Banking" · "SAX Technology — IT Strategy." Descriptive navigation converts. Logo parades do not.
- saxwa.com services grid: Move Athletes & Artists from position eight to position two or three. Position communicates priority before a visitor reads a word.

PRIORITY 3 — ACTIVATE CARLA LIDE'S DIGITAL PRESENCE

summary, areas of expertise (NIL planning, signing bonus management, multi-jurisdiction tax, post-career wealth, legacy building), direct intake link or email. Written in her voice, not corporate boilerplate.

- Athletes & Artists page update: Add Carla as the named lead — photo, title, "Schedule time with Carla" link. Replace or augment the generic "Start Here" button. A name converts. A button does not.
- Announcement content: Publish a news item on saxwa.com and saxadvisorygroup.com. Not a press release — a statement of intent. What is Carla building at SAX? What do athlete clients gain from this hire? What does SAX's integrated model mean for a player navigating the financial decisions of their career? This has SEO value (name search) and referral value (something to share when making an introduction) simultaneously.
- Team page: Add direct contact pathways for Carla Lide, Kirk Loerwald, and Ryan Harris — email or intake link. Agents making referrals need a direct line to the athletes team, not a general consultation scheduler designed for retail clients.

PRIORITY 4 — REPOSITION THE ATHLETES PAGE TO LEAD WITH THE DIFFERENTIATOR

The Integrated Model Should Be the First Sentence

The athletes page currently opens with: "Talent creates opportunity — thoughtful planning helps protect and grow it." This is true. It is also what every RIA that serves athletes says, in slightly different words. It does not answer the question every agent brings to a first conversation: why SAX instead of the dozens of firms that claim to serve athletes?

The answer is the integrated model. The wealth advisor, the CPA, and the tax strategist are in the same firm, working from the same information, on the same team. For a player who has watched a signing bonus evaporate because three advisors never talked to each other, this is not a feature — it is the argument. It is currently bullet seven.

Recommended opening paragraph for the athletes page:

"Most wealth advisors are investment managers. They do not do your taxes. They do not coordinate with your accountant. When a large contract hits, you talk to three separate professionals who each see only their piece. At SAX, the wealth advisor, the build wealth that lasts past the playing years."

Then introduce the service pillars as expressions of that integrated capability. Then introduce the named team. Then a specific CTA: "Schedule a consultation with Carla Lide and the SAX Athletes & Artists team" — with a direct intake link.

PRIORITY 5 — BUILD THE SAX FAMILY HUB

One Page That Explains the Integrated Firm

Create a single page — on saxadvisorygroup.com or as a standalone — that maps the SAX family of companies and articulates why four entities working together create more value than any one alone.

This page should be linked from every utility bar as "About SAX" or "The SAX Family," replacing the current unlabeled logo parade. A visitor arriving on any site should understand within ten seconds what SAX is, what makes it different, and which entity serves their need.

For the athletes audience specifically, this page should answer: what does it mean for an athlete that their wealth advisor is in the same firm as their CPA, their tax strategist, and their business transaction advisor? That answer — stated clearly in one place — is the content that converts a referral into a first conversation. It does not currently exist anywhere in the SAX digital ecosystem.
